HETEROPHEMY. - In order that we might state correctly the question which had been raised in the Virginia Senate as to a constitutional majority we on Wednesday took up the Dispatch and read the state-ment contained in the report of the Sen-ate proceedings. Then we sat down and wrote of a quorum. However, the argusame in the two cases, the rd "elected" being the word upon ich the question turned.

The question in the national House of Representatives was as to a constitutional quorum; in Virginia as to a constitutional majority. But in both bodies a constitu-tional constituntatives was as to a constitutional tional majority and a constitutional quo-

In writing the article I was prompted by but one motive—viz., to draw attention to the subject which I knew would bring some relief to our over-burdened tax-payles, who were "bearing burdens to togrievous to be borne."

Had I been seeking popular preferment I am as well aware as our Senator that this was not the road.

Senator Stubbs admits that the boated oysters should be taxed, the bedding-grounds should be taxed, and riparian rights secured, &c. This was all I claimed as against our people and the latter an ad valorem tax of 19 per cent.—It is consumer, but I expressly stated that no tax should be under the consumer, but I expressly stated that no tax should be taxed the latter an ad valorem tax of 19 per cont.—This, with the renting of the planting-grounds, is the chief resources and from which nearly all the revenue is to be obtained.

new light has suddenly dawned upon our Senator and that six times as much revenue can be secured from this source as he has been enabled to get heretofore.

May we not hope with a little more application to the subject he might increase the amount sixfold more, giving us $750,000? This would look something like a reasonable income from this business.

He speaks of an effort to over-tax, overestimate, and exaggerate. Senator Stubbs is too good a lawyer to discredit his own witness.

To allow J. B. West to erect a wharf on Cherrystone croek, in Northampton County.

To allow J. B. West to erect a wharf on Cherrystone croek, in Northampton County.

What does the Hon. J. T. Wilkins, Superintendent of Fisheries, say?

He makes the catch of oysters nearly 7,000,000 bushels. The crab interest has nearly as many engaged in tast the oyster and ismore profitable. If this is true from those sources ten cents per bushel upon oysters and 10 per cent, upon crabs would yield $1,400,000. This does not include the lax upon fisheries, or boats, or planted or fine quality of oysters, or the renting of planting-grounds, all of which in the agreement would sum up between $2,000,000.

This is feasible and practicable, but proper legislation and supervision must be had to secure it.

In conclusion, Senator Stubbs claims that Thdewater Virginia pays more tax now than any other section of Virginia to population, and argues to obtain a larger revenue from this source would be an unequal and unjust burden upon her people.

It is not proposed to place this burden upon our own people, but upon the continuer outside of the State. The only tax we assume is on boats and rental on planting-grounds. This surely cannot be objected to; the Senator is willing to this.

My friend and representative, I appeal to you to give this relief.

CEMINAL CHARGES.

At 1 o'clock Mr. Blackstone called for the special order—the nine bills presented by the Committee for Courts of Justice looking to the reduction of the criminal expenses of the State. The bills were not read, but Mr. Blackstone, as they were taken up seriation, explained the changes to be made in the existing law.

When the bill making changes in the fees to be paid Commonwealth's attorneys came up it was passed by momentarily and the succeeding ones were considered and a low amendments adopted, but not of any important character.

Mr. Harrison made an effort to have violations of the local-option law brought under the jurisdiction of the justices of the peace, but the proposition was opposed by Mesars. Moore and Blackstone and defeated by Mesers. Moore and Discustone and defeated.

The three bills offered by the Finance Committee with this same end in view were next taken up and ordered to their engrossment. The bill touching the pay of witnesses was amended so as to provide that fees for the attendance of witnesses for the Commonwealth before a justice of the peace or police justice shall be taxed as a part of the costs against the defendant in case of conviction and paid to the parties entitled if collected.

The bill in relation to the fees of Commonwealth's attorneys was after some discussion passed by until to-day, when it will either lead to a prolonged discussion or be recommitted.

The first of these bills provide that the ordinary venire facias shall consist of twelve instead of twenty jurors.

The next so amends the Code in relation to payment of fees to officers out of the Treasury in criminal cases as to provide that no account shall be allowed or paid for prosecutions of offences against the ordinances of any city or town.

The third of the series, which was passed by until to-day, so amends section 3523 of the Code of Virginia, in relation to fees of attorneys for the Commonwealth, as to provide that for every case of felony prosecuted to a judgment this official shall receive $10; where there is an indictment for felony, and the party is convicted of misdemeanor only $5 shall be received. For misdemeanor prosecutions the fee shall be $5; but no such fee shall be paid out of the Treasury unless and until the judge of the court where the case was tried shall certify that in his opinion the same cannot be collected of the defendant by process of law.

PENSIONING SOLDIERS.

At 1 o'clock the special order for the day was announced. It was the bill introduced by Mr. Bolen "to give additional aid to soldiers and sailors maimed in the late war."

Mr. Bolen spoke in earnest advocacy of the bill, and he was ably sustained by Mr. Gibson, whose remarks were pointed and direct. He declared that the Goddess of Liberty had become the wet-nurse of Africa, and that Virginia soldiers had redeemed their State from a state of lethargy. The war showed that we were worthy sons of sires who had drawn the Declaration of Independence, the Bill of Rights, and men who had fought at Point Pleasant, New Orleans, Lundy's Lane, Chapultepec, Melino de Rey. In closing, Mr. Gibson said he could not see how any Virginian could vote against the bill.

Mr. Chambers, an ex-Federal soldier, came forward, and in eloquent words advocated the bill. He wished the celestial fire could touch his brains when he opened his mouth in tones of praise for Virginia his mouth in tones of praise for Virginia soldiers.

Mr. Chambers made one of the happiest speeches heard in the House for many sessions. He painted the picture of battles when he fought Confederate batteries, and great applause greeted him.

Mr. Jones, of Brunswick, a Republican, asked Mr. Chambers on what side he fought.

"I was a captain in the Federal army," replied Mr. Chambers. "I fought for what I believed right. I fought as a Democrat. I fight now as one, and I would fight better if I knew how for the passage of this bill." The greatest applause was given this declaration.

The bill provides that the soldiers who sitherto received $15 per annum shall berefter receive $20 per year, and that those half as much disabled as if they had lost imbe shall receive $10 per annum. It also provides that those who lost eyes shall receive $30 per annum.

Mr. Joynes asked that the bill granting more holidays be placed upon its passage. He said the measure met the approval of many of the bank clerks, who claimed that it would facilitate business in such institutions. He asked that the motion to dismiss be voted down. A recorded vote was called for by Mr. Curtis and showed that the bill was dismissed. The House refused to reconsider.
